Stockholm Police Hope to Have Murderer Identified by Means of a Dream.

IMPORTANT WITNESS ILL

(Special from United Press.) Stockholm, Sept. 29-The identification of a murderer by a man who never saw the prisoner but claims to have seen the murder committed in a dream will be attempted by the local police department just as soon as Gen. Bjoerlin, who is now critically ill in the west of Sweden, is strong enough to examine photographs of the anarchist who assassinated his friend, General Beckman on the night of June 26. At the very hour that the crime was committed but many miles from the seen of it, General Bjoerlin, raving in delirium saw, in a fever-inspired dream, his old friend shot down in a street in Stockholm. in Stockholm.

Suddenly he shouted, "Drop that, you scoundrel!" then, "The shots are exploding." When the nurse sought to exploding." When the nurse sought to calm him he became angry and tried to spring out of bed. "Can't you hear?" he cried, "Can't you see the smoke? They have murdered General Beckman. Don't you see the blood on the street?" He raved all night out at daybreak had calmed and slept an hour. When he woke up he said, "You will find that General Beckman has been murdered. I am sure of it." He even described the crime in detail.

walked to police headquarters at Kinsley and Market streets, a crowd following that blocked the streets on both sides of the station.

Johnson continued fighting and had to be thrown to the floor and held while he was being searched, and in spite of the handling he received, he continued to kick and fight until he was landed in a cell. Liquor could be smalled on his breath and it is besmelled on his breath, and it is be-lieved that it was that that caused his insanity. He thrashed around his cell trying to bite the steel bars and strik-ing them with his fists. After he had "God rather than men must be obeyed," the communication declares. The

"You leave me alone, I say."

"You leave me alone, I say."
He kept shouting this, although the conductor had only spoken to him. He was then told by the conductor that should the Italian flag play any part in a Columbus Day celebration. The ships of Columbus were Spanish, his men were Spanish and the jewels of a Spanish Queen backed the enterprise. It takes a great deal of nerve to ring in the Italian flag at a Columbus Day celebration as it was done a year ago. Garibaldi belongs to the Italians more than Columbus but they ignore him and try to get before the American people with "We were the first here" cry.
